“Dr Reese Halter seems to have made one of the most comprehensive theories concerning the disappearance of bees that I have read in the last 10 years. His latest book ‘The Incomparable Honeybee and the Economics of Pollination’ appears to be quite interesting—solving a huge problem that would result in many different industries having to ‘re-think’ the way a lot of chemicals in our society. I expect many of the chemical companies to balk, deny their products are harmful and try to go on with their ‘business as usual’. In the past, scientists were baffled by news about Colony Collapse Disorder occurring in bees in different areas of the world. Dr. Halter appears to have put together a plausible explanation for this massive bee reduction. Maybe there is a solution and hope for this massive problem.”
